

Learning Goals and Expectations

Prior to your first meeting, take the time to document your goals and objectives for your mentorship partnership. During your first meeting, we recommend that you review this form with your mentor, not only to explain your own goals and expectations, but to understand those of your mentor as well.

My Learning Goals

We often benefit by defining and writing down the things we want to achieve. Write down specific things you want to learn throughout the duration of your time with your mentor. By having a list of goals, your mentor will be better able to help you find the people and information you need to learn new business skills.

My Expectations

It is always best to seek clarity at the beginning of your partnership about what information, connections or assistance your mentor is able and willing to provide. Write down what you expect to receive from your mentor and take the time to discuss them at your first meeting.

My Mentor's Expectations

During your first meeting, take the time to ask your mentor what his or her primary expectations are for your partnership. Write them down, and discuss any questions you may have about what he or she expects from you and your partnership.
